Privacy Policy of Sue Foss, M.Ac, EAMP

The Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996 (HIPAA), gives you rights over your health information, including the right to get a copy of your information, make sure it is correct, and know who has seen it.

Sharing of information: By law, your information may be shared in the process of billing your insurance, or with other providers who are involved with your care. You may consent in writing if you would like your information shared with others. You may revoke your consent at any time, also in writing.

Person Involved In Care: In order to accommodate the notification of your location, your general condition, or death, your protected health information maybe used or disclosed to a family member, your personal representative, or another person responsible for your care. If you are present and wish to object to such disclosures of your protected health information, you may do so. To the extent you are incapacitated or emergency circumstances exist, we will disclose protected health information using our professional judgment disclosing only protected health information that is directly relevant to the person's involvement in your healthcare. We will use our professional judgment and our experience with common practices to make reasonable inferences of your best interest in allowing a person to pick up filled prescriptions, medical supplies, x-rays, or other similar forms of protected health information.

Use and Disclosure Without Consent:

In some limited situations, the law requires us to use and disclose your health information without your permission. These examples include:

- When state or federal law mandates certain health information be reported for a specific purpose.
- For public health purposes, such as contagious disease reporting and notices to and from the FDA regarding drugs and medical devices.
- Disclosure to government authorities about victims or suspected abuse, neglect, or domestic violence.
- Uses and disclosures for health oversight activities, such as for the audits by Medicare, or for investigation of possible violations of health care laws.
- Disclosures in response to subpoenas or orders of the court.
- Disclosures for law enforcement purposes, such as to provide information about someone who is suspected to be a victim of a crime, or to provide information about a crime in our office

If you think your rights are being denied or your health information is not being protected, you have the right to file a complaint with your provider, health insurer, or the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services.
